CINDY

I told you she was good.

MELODY

Yeah. And I thought it was going to be awkward, but it was easy talking to her.

CINDY

So what does she think?

MELODY

She basically counted today as a free session and would like to talk to me and Tony together. But I don't know if Tony is going to want to go.

CINDY

Why haven't you said anything to him?

MELODY

I don't know. It's not that easy to tell your husband that you don't feel like he loves you anymore.

CINDY

Yeah, but at least he won't be left in the dark.

MELODY

The therapist said something in that regard too. She said just because I feel that way doesn't mean that's how Tony feels. She wants to teach us about Gary Chapman's Five Languages of Love. Not sure what that is, but she wants to do it with both of us.

CINDY

I think that would be a good thing. Plus, I've seen how Tony acts around you. Personally, I don't think he fell out of love with you. He is always telling you how great you look, how sexy you are, buying you things and flirting with you.

MELODY

You don't understand, Cindy. We used to do so much together. He used to spend a lot of quality time with me. All those words and gifts are cool, but your actions speak louder than your words. Material things don't mean much when you can afford it.

CINDY

Well, you know your husband better than anybody else. If you say so, then I believe you. Just do something about it. It's starting to affect your life.

MELODY

You would think I'm pregnant. The stress makes me eat late at night and have all types of cravings. And I keep having this dull pain in my stomach.

CINDY

You definitely want to resolve this before you start blowing up. Before you know it, you'll start looking like Precious.

Melody and Cindy laugh.

MELODY

Tony would fall out of love with me for sure. He does not like big girls.

CINDY

Tony's not going anywhere. Plus, if you gain weight by giving him that child he so desires, I doubt weight would be the first thing on his mind.
